PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

We Are On A Roll! I am pleased to announce that the annual Incline Village-Crystal Bay Republican

Women's Garden Party on July 14th was a huge success. We had an overflow crowd gather in the lovely backyard of Ellie and Cliff Dobler, overlooking the Championship Golf Course in Incline. Our Hawaiian-themed dinner by A Catered Affaire was "ono" (delicious), as they say in the islands. And there was tropical décor, aloha shirts, and flower-printed attire to complement a content-rich evening. Brendan Donovan sang the national anthem and God Bless America, his strong voice echoing across the golf course for all to hear and appreciate!

This event would not have been a success without the help of many club members and spouses including first Vice President Shirley Appel who coordinated the candidate invitations, Cretia Eyster and Connie Skidmore who staffed the check-in desk, Kathi Congistre who sold drink tickets, Celine Nugent who solicited donations for our special prize, Lorri Waldman who distributed "Make Washoe Red" tickets, bartenders Ray Appel and Joe Schultz, Weesie Daniels who handled the boutique, and Gary Stewart who took the photographs you see in this newsletter.

The two scholarship winners, Tyler Knight and Liberty Hanson, were poised and eloquent as they shared their winning essays with the crowd. The essays are re-printed in this newsletter for those who would like to enjoy them again. Each student will receive a $2,000 scholarship. And we heard from a dozen key Republican candidates who will be on the November ballot, including several judges and school board candidates. A list of the candidates who spoke can be found on page 4 of the newsletter. I encourage you to support them for election. Electing Republicans for local and state offices also helps President Trump by showing support for the principles and values of our Party.

Your IVCBRW Board has full program planned for the balance of the summer and 2020. We will host a dinner event at the Chateau on August 11th starting at 5:00 PM. Seating will be limited and you must reserve your place and pay in advance to ensure a spot. We will also hold the annual Fall Fashion Show on September 8th with darling clothes from Boutique Elegante modeled by our club members. Mark these dates on your calendar and look for more details soon.

In a time when we see so much of our history and culture being senselessly attacked, I am proud of what we are doing as a Club to uphold the values of family, faith, and country. This is not an easy time to show you are a patriot and support law and order. The protection of property and people is one of the most fundamental responsibilities of government, and yet we see so many mayors and local officials denying this basic task we have elected them to perform. Electing conservatives to the IVGID Board and Washoe County Commission is one way you can respond.

Our Republicans in the State Legislature have fought an uphill battle against higher taxes and more financial burdens on Nevadans, particularly at a time when many are fiscally strapped due to the inconsistent edicts of the Governor, all done in the name of Covid. We need to get more Republicans elected in November to both the State Assembly and State Senate. That is why we will be starting our voter registration efforts in August and many of us will be walking door-to-door for President Trump and other candidates as well as calling voters on his behalf. We are also building up our funds to provide money to the Political Action Committee (PAC) coordinated by the women's clubs of Northern Nevada. Your attendance at our events, purchases at the boutique, and donations for our monthly prizes all add to the coffers of our club.

You are an important part of our success and I look forward to working with each of you in the months ahead to restore our nation to its rightful place as the greatest place on earth to live, work, and raise a family.

The French Revolution - Have We Learned Much Since Then?

A recent video by Dr. Steve Turley has an interesting analysis of Black Lives Matter (BLM) and the French Revolution. His thesis is that BLM is simply a Trojan Horse, hiding a more basic issue. He thinks it will destroy the Democratic Party. Maybe, maybe not!

He compares the left with the people of the French Revolution, a period of social and political upheaval in France and its colonies that began 1789 and ended 1799. The revolutionaries hated all things as they were and competed with each other to be more "woke" and rejected nationalism, in favor of tribalism. Inspired by liberal and radical ideas such as equality before the law, the Revolution influenced the decline of monarchies and fought to replace them with liberal democracies. In about 18 months, they murdered about 600,000 citizens and changed the week to a ten day, rather than a seven day, cycle. Churches were replaced by the God of Reason, while priests, nuns and pastors were murdered.

It's foolish to think this can't happen here!

FROM: Morning in Nevada

Dear Members,

For months, we at Morning in Nevada PAC have been leading the fight against the left's dangerous push for all-mail voting here in Nevada.

Unfortunately, back in the spring, Nevada Secretary of State Barbara Cegavske converted Nevada's primary elections to all-mail voting, which exposed our elections to the risk of widespread fraud. It was a misguided decision, but thankfully, thousands of you joined us in speaking up, making it clear that you don't want all-mail voting in our state. It's clear today that your voice is being heard, as it appears Secretary Cegavske will not repeat her mistake for the General Election.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal reports that, "Nevada Secretary of State Barbara Cegavske said the state plans to return to a traditional, in-person election format for the Nov. 3 general election."

This is a big victory, but we are not out of the woods yet. Local officials in Clark County, which has Nevada's largest number of voters, continue to push for mail-in voting for the General Election, but the plan would need to be approved by the Secretary of State — who has the unilateral authority to reject this dangerous scheme.

We must keep the pressure on Secretary Cegavske. We're asking that you take just a few minutes of your time and call or email her office and demand she say "NO" to Clark County's plan. Nevada Secretary of State phone number is 775-684-5705, email: nvelect@sos.nv.gov.

Thank you for fighting alongside us — our efforts are paying off, and if we keep the pressure up, we can keep all-mail voting out of our state!

For Nevada,

Adam Paul Laxalt

How Close Are We to Becoming a Socialist Country?

by Susan Schnetz

Karl Marx is one of the most influential writers of the last 200 years. He was born into a Jewish family in Prussia on May 5, 1818. His father was a noted lawyer in Trier, a city in the southern Rhineland region of Germany.

Karl Marx authored several socialist writings along with Frederich Engels and became famous for his socialist movements and establishment of communist theories. Marx ended his life saying, "... my objective in life is to de-throne God and destroy capitalism."

Many have followed the teachings and ideals of Karl Marx including Black Lives Matter (BLM). BLM claims to be a Marxist organization and espouses his ideas – now, so does the Democratic Party. Presidential nominee Joe Biden's newly-released platform is a carbon copy of many Marxist ideas. Who authored the platform? The ones who plan to rule our country after November if Joe Biden becomes president. The fact that Biden has opposed most of these ideas in the past does not matter; if he is our next president, he definitely will be a pawn for a left-leaning Marxist agenda. Alarming truth: if Joe Biden wins - our liberty and freedom and everything we take for granted will be at risk.

Did you know that the former vice president authored the "Consent Decree?" The Decree was offered as an answer to racial problems in our country. Example, when police departments are accused of racism, the federal government (then led by Attorney General Eric Holder) could withhold prosecution if the departments would allow federal control of their police. In other words, the police would be nationalized and placed under the control of political masters. This was something former President Obama eagerly supported – "a national police force, as large and well-funded as the military." Joe Biden can't wait to restart this Obama-Era police reform.

Here are some key Marxist ideas:

1. A progressive income tax - the more you make, the greater a percentage the government takes.
2. No private property. Remember - without property rights, you have no civil rights.
3. Free education for all - but only in government controlled schools and with their curriculum.
4. Government controlled/owned communications and transportation.
5. A national bank controlled by the government.
6. Government control or ownership of most business.

So, where are we now? Think back to recent videos of people interviewing students and graduates. Most did not know why we celebrated the 4th of July, or who we won independence from, or what war was fought to gain independence, or even in what century that happened.

But most knew who Karl Marx was and what he stood for!

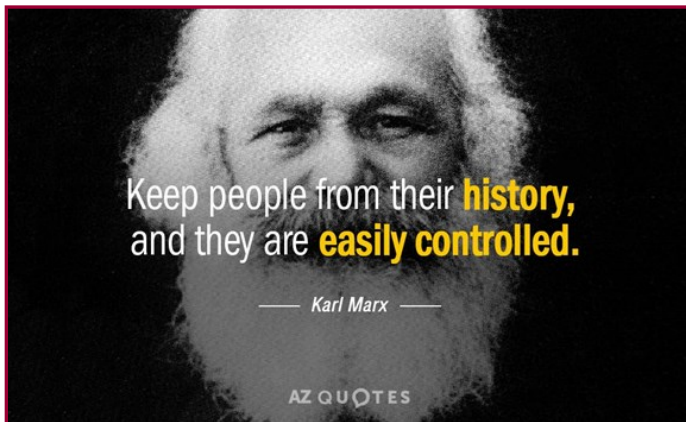

It's not just students who are being betrayed by left-leaning educators, literature abounds with good things to say about Karl Marx. For instance, Wikipedia's biography subtitle for Karl Marx (May 5, 1818-March 14, 1883) is "Philosopher," and Informory.com writes, he is "one of the greatest economists the world has seen." The on-line encyclopedia declares, "The world knows him as the founder of International Workingman's Association, Communist League, and German Worker's Society" ... like these are noble and life-enriching organizations!

In November, your vote will count as no other has.

Odd it is. Nazis, were National Socialists that tore down statues. Banned free speech. Blamed economic hardships on one group of people. Instituted gun control. Put the state before God. Nationalized health care. Placed strict government regulations on industry.

Does this sound like the policies of a current political party in the U.S.?

Karl Marx Quotes

- In every revolution there intrude, at the side of its true agents, men of a different stamp; some of them survivors of and devotees to past revolutions, without insight into the present movement, but preserving popular influence by their known honesty and courage, or by the sheer force of tradition; others mere brawlers, who, by dint of repeating year after year the same set of stereotyped declamations against the government of the day, have sneaked into the reputation of revolutionists of the first water[.] They are an unavoidable evil: with time they are shaken off.
- The production of too many useful things results in too many useless people.
- Religion is the opium of the masses.

$ Follow the Money

Several major corporations have made “donations” to Black Line Matters (BLM). These are political donations, as there is no evidence that BLM engages in charitable work, only in death and destruction. As such, they become just another combat arm of the Democrat party. A reported total of $1.5 billion was donated to BLM with no restrictions on what they do with it, nor with any need to be accountable for how the money is used. Bank of America led the way with $1 billion. Amazon, Comcast, WalMart and Google donated a total of half a billion, as well.

Google Is Evil

By Douglas Andrews

The tech giant's monopoly is increasingly a major threat to free political speech. Recently there was a marked anniversary of sorts, but it passed without a whisper. In 2019, Robert Epstein warned Congress about the very real threat Google poses to our republican form of government and how to deal with that threat. To which our elected representatives have responded by doing pretty much nothing.

Epstein, a Harvard-educated behavioral psychologist and the former editor-in-chief of Psychology Today, gave sworn Senate testimony that began, “I love America and democracy, and I am also not a conservative.” Having established his left-leaning bona fides, he then offered evidence of what every fair-minded person who’s ever done a politics-related Google search have long suspected: “Data I’ve collected since 2016 show that Google displays content to the American public that is biased in favor of one political party — a party I happen to like, but that’s irrelevant. Democracy as originally conceived,” he said, “cannot survive Big Tech as currently empowered.”

Epstein went on to explain what he calls the Search Engine Manipulation Effect, or SEME, which measures how opinions (and votes) can be altered by search algorithms that favor one candidate or party over another. A month later, Epstein published a Bloomberg op-ed detailing the three biggest threats posed by Big Tech: (1) aggressive surveillance, (2) suppression of content, and (3) “the subtle manipulation of the thinking and behavior of more than 2.5 billion people.” Epstein also proposed a solution involving transparency and competition — two concepts that Big Tech avoids like Brussels sprouts.

More recently, lawmakers and U.S. Attorney General William Barr have been exploring a different solution — that of reevaluating Section 230 of the 1996 Communications Decency Act, which currently grants Big Tech protections against lawsuits aimed at the content on their platforms. Those “platforms” have in recent years been behaving like progressive publishers, however, and they should no longer be able to hide behind Section 230. This is certainly true of Google, which, together with its YouTube subsidiary, controls a monopolistic share (more than 90 percent) of online searches.

“Unfortunately,” Barr told Fox News’s Maria Bartiromo on her Sunday television show, these tech platforms “started taking down viewpoints and started really being selective and, based on whether they agreed with the viewpoint or not, taking [those viewpoints] down. And that should make them a publisher.”

The unwise have said that Google can’t fool them. But Google doesn’t have to fool anyone; it can simply fool the other guy. The 2016 presidential election, for example, was decided by fewer than 78,000 votes out of 136 million cast. Donald Trump won Michigan by 0.2 points, and Pennsylvania and Wisconsin both by 0.7 points. Thus, if Big Tech could’ve swayed the votes of just two late-deciders out of each thousand votes cast in Michigan, and just seven out of each thousand cast in Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, Hillary Clinton would be your president.

Daniel Hannan, a journalist and former member of the British Parliament, wrote about the “unholy alliance of big government and Big Tech,” which evolved out of tech companies’ desire to protect themselves from those who would tax and regulate them, while at the same time setting up a system that kept out new competitors. “Whose fault is all this?” Hannan asked. He answered, “I’m afraid it’s yours. You allowed the Big Tech companies to get their hands on your data in the first place. You say you don’t like it, but in practice, you don’t really care.” Indeed, every time you search with Google instead of, say, Bing or DuckDuckGo, you’re supporting an information colossus that’s working to undo everything you hold dear.

There was a time, up until just a few years ago, when Google lived and worked by the words, “Don’t be evil,” which was its unofficial motto. When it removed that language from its corporate code of conduct in 2015, we should’ve smelled a rat.

Tell all your friends: Google is evil.

NFRW Capital Connection: Women to Watch in 2020

Republican Women Enter the Congressional Arena in Record Numbers

“One hundred years after securing the right to vote for women, Republican women are making history again, stepping up in record numbers to run for Congress,” NFRW President Ann Schockett observed. “The NFRW is proud to see so many of our own in the arena.” So far this year, 227 Republican women have filed for Congress, blowing past the previous high of 133 set in 2010. A record 63 of those women have secured the GOP nomination, with 19 states still to complete their nomination process. Profiles of Republican Women to Watch in 2020 are being featured on the NFRW website, beginning with Michelle Steel, Ashley Hinson, and Esther Joy King.

It was we, the people; not we, the white male citizens; nor yet we, the male citizens; but we, the whole people, who formed the Union. And we formed it, not to give the blessings of liberty, but to secure them; not to the half of ourselves and the half of our posterity, but to the whole people - women as well as men.

IVCBRW are pleased to present a scholarship essay from Tyler Knight, one of our two winners. Tyler will be attending the University of the Pacific and has a baseball scholarship as well as the funds provided by our Club.

Victory Through Hard Work and How this Approach has Worked for Me

By Tyler Knight

I love baseball. I've always loved baseball and have been "playing" since I could walk. Some of my earliest memories are playing catch with my dad. My goal growing up was always to play baseball at the collegiate level. Because of my hard work and determination, even with two elbow surgeries during high school, I have reached my goal! Another goal I had was to play college baseball at the highest level - Division 1 - and I achieved that too! I've been offered a roster spot to pitch for the University of the Pacific Baseball team in Stockton, California.

Baseball and other organized sports (soccer, basketball and tennis) has been a staple in my life and taught me to be a leader, work hard and keep reaching for what I want. Playing sports has taught me that life isn't always easy and that you have to work very hard to get what you want. I am a better student because of sports. Sports taught me confidence, teamwork, work ethic, discipline and time management.

Elementary and middle school were relatively easy and I earned nearly straight A's in all my classes. However, high school has been challenging for me. When entering high school, I had just received a prestigious award given by the staff of Incline Middle School - The Mountain Lion Award. This award was given to me because I was "a shining example of how hard work and perseverance can pay off in the long run." Unfortunately, 9th and 10th grades of high school were VERY difficult! Learning to be independent and managing my time were the hardest lessons to learn and it seemed that teachers didn't "have my back" anymore. Teachers treated us like adults and I didn't feel like one.

Sports let me down in high school as my right elbow began to hurt and I was losing mobility and strength. I had a condition called OCD and during the summer after my freshman year, I had elbow surgery to clean it out.

The rehabilitation was hard and very demanding, and not being permitted to play sports was devastating. I was not with my friends and teammates on a daily basis and I missed the comradery. My grades suffered and I felt peer pressure from my non-teammates which led me to hanging with the wrong people and making bad choices.

In my Junior year of high school, things changed for the better! I was able to again compete in sports, which gave me the confidence and maturity to ask for help with my school work and not be ashamed to do so. I was again with my teammates and my GPA rose, which in turn gave me more confidence. I excelled at sports again and became the leader I had been previously. Even though I had another surgery which finally cured my elbow problem in the middle of my Junior year, I stayed the course and continued to thrive. I started to drive, got a summer job, worked hard and focused on my love of baseball and enjoyed a ton of good friends!

All of my hard work and determination to be a good student-athlete paid off. I am the team captain for all three of my varsity sports this year. Our basketball team went to State, and I was selected First Team All State and First Team All Conference. I feel I am back in control of my future. I've matured and am very much looking forward to what university life will bring. I've received a partial academic scholarship from University of the Pacific and was offered a roster spot on the baseball team: I am going to pitch for the Tigers! I am undecided as to what I want to study, but am confident that I can work hard and successfully combine baseball and my studies. I am very excited about the next chapter in my life. Thank you for your consideration.

"Every child in America should be acquainted with his own country. He should read books that furnish him with ideas that will be useful to him in life and practice. As soon as he opens his lips, he should rehearse the history of his own country."

—Noah Webster (1788)

1856 – The First Republican National Convention: The Anti-Slavery Party

The 1856 Republican National Convention was a presidential nominating convention that met from June 17 to June 19 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It was the first national convention in the history of the Republican Party, and was held to nominate the party's candidates for president and vice president in the 1856 election. The convention selected former Senator John C. Frémont of California for president and former Senator William L. Dayton of New Jersey for vice president. The convention also appointed the members of the newly-established Republican National Committee.

The Republican Party had been organized by opponents of the expansion of slavery in the territories following the passage of the 1854 Kansas–Nebraska Act. With William Seward, Salmon P. Chase, and Charles Sumner all taking their names out of consideration, Frémont entered the Republican convention as the front-runner for the presidential nomination. Frémont had previously been nominated by the North American Party, which consisted of anti-slavery members of the American Party who were unwilling to support the American Party candidate, Millard Fillmore. Though Associate Justice John McLean of Ohio had the backing of some delegates, Frémont clinched the presidential nomination on the first formal ballot of the Republican convention.

Dayton was nominated on the first formal vice presidential ballot, defeating former Congressman Abraham Lincoln of Illinois and several other candidates. The Republican ticket carried several Northern states in the general election, but the Democratic ticket of James Buchanan and John C. Breckinridge won the 1856 election.

Candidate for President, John C. Fremont

Background

On June 19, 1855, a small gathering of like-minded individuals met in Washington, D.C. where they passed a resolution noting the recent abrogation of “all compromises, real or imaginary” by the opening of Kansas Territory and Nebraska Territory to the possible institution of slavery. These proclaimed themselves the “Republican Association of Washington, District of Columbia” and passed a simple four plank platform including the demand that “There should be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except for the punishment of crime, in any of the Territories of the United States.” A number of state organizations were soon established along similar lines and the Republican Party was effectively born.

On January 17, 1856, representatives of Republican Party organizations in Ohio, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Vermont, and Wisconsin – all Northern states in which slavery was prohibited – issued a joint call for an “informal Convention” to be held in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on February 22, 1856, in order to perfect the national organization and to call a formal, properly delegated national convention to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States for the forthcoming November 1856 election. The gathering elected a governing National Executive Committee and passed various resolutions calling for the repeal of laws enabling slaveholding in free territories and "resistance by Constitutional means of Slavery in any Territory," defense of anti-slavery individuals in Kansas who were coming under physical attack, and a call to "resist and overthrow the present National Administration" of Franklin Pierce, "as it is identified with the progress of the Slave power to national supremacy."

The 22-member Republican National Committee, which included one representative from each state attending the Pittsburgh Convention, met in plenary session on March 27, 1856, at the Willard Hotel in Washington, DC, and issued a call for a formal presidential nominating convention. This was slated to begin on June 17, 1856, in Philadelphia. Each state organization was to be allocated six at-large delegates, plus three delegates for each congressional district.

We must reject the idea that every time a law's broken, society is guilty rather than the lawbreaker. It is time to restore the American precept that each individual is accountable for his actions.

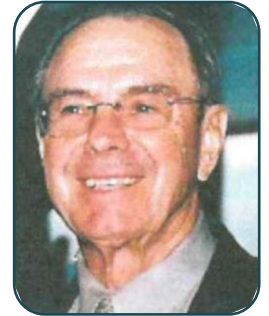

RONALD REAGAN

Remembering Clyde A. Kowallis

Clyde A. Kowallis, born January 12, 1935 in Boise, Idaho - died June 23, 2020 in Palm Desert, California, at home, from acute myeloid leukemia.

Clyde was born and raised in Boise and graduated from Boise High School in 1953. He was on the Golf Team and earned his letter in football. After high school he attended Boise Junior College. Clyde spent his childhood summers from age four to 14 on his maternal grandparents farm in Minden, Utah - not as a summer camper but as a farm worker to help his grandfather, as the other male relatives were serving in the war. In fact, Clyde attributed that time as a character building education.

After his father started the business of Kowallis & Richards (industrial hardware) in 1949, Clyde spent the rest of his business life working there. Other than for a stint in the Idaho Army National Guard, which covered a total of 10 years, he graduated from OCS and left the service in 1962 as a 1st Lieutenant.

Clyde married Carol Ann Crandall in 1955. They had two sons, Tracy and Terry. Clyde was a big supporter of the Boise State Broncos, having lifetime seats for all Boise State events and attended the Fiesta Bowls, Poinsettia Bowl and away games in Honolulu. Carol died in 2001. Shortly thereafter he was introduced to Gail Arnold by mutual friends in the desert. Clyde called this time of his life "his second act" - they were married in 2005.

Gail and Clyde had a wonderful life together. Clyde was always involved in sports - he started playing golf when he was eight years old and started shooting his age when he was 79. He was a member of Hillcrest Country Club in Boise and a member of Ironwood Country Club in Palm Desert, CA. He enjoyed tennis, skiing and hiking until recent years. The couple enjoyed their summers in Lake Tahoe where they had a power boat for calm mornings and a sailboat for Tahoe's afternoon winds. They enjoyed traveling and visited every continent, some more than once.

Clyde is survived by his widow, Gail, of Palm Desert, CA and Incline Village, NV - his sons Tracy (Sandy), Terry (Marcy), grandson, Bill of Boise - granddaughter, Carly, of Colorado Springs, his brother Ray (Barbara) of Fort Oglethorpe, GA, his nieces Sherry (Mike) Nolen of Shaver Lake CA, and Chris (Louis) Amorebieta of Eagle, ID - and Gail's children, Ed (Carol) Arnold of Auburn, CA, Deanne (Allen) Gray of Reno, NV and grandchildren, Hudson (Sarah) Arnold of Alameda, CA, Amelia Arnold of San Rafael, CA, Casey Gray of Reno, NV and Harrison Gray of San Diego, CA, who loved and appreciated Clyde in their lives so very much. Clyde was preceded in death by his granddaughter, Katie Lee. He will be missed by all who knew and loved him.

Pack up all my care and woe,
Here I go, singing low,
Bye bye Biden!

No one here can love or understand me,
Oh, what hard luck stories they all hand me.
Make my bed and light the light,
I'll be home late tonight —
Bye bye, Biden, bye bye!
